Dear [redacted] (S)

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Both personally and on behalf of the FBI, I want to congratulate you on your retirement from the CIA. I understand you officially retired [redacted] but have stayed on these past few months to assist the Agency. We will miss our contacts with you and the valuable guidance and assistance which you have always provided this Bureau. You are certainly deserving of praise for [redacted] of dedicated service which you have given your country, and my associates and I wish you a productive and happy future.

Title 3—

The President

Executive Order 12139 of May 23, 1979

Foreign Intelligence Electronic Surveillance

By the authority vested in me as President by Sections 102 and 104 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1802 and 1804), in order to provide as set forth in that Act for the authorization of electronic surveillance for foreign intelligence purposes, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1-101. Pursuant to Section 102(a)(1) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1802(a)), the Attorney General is authorized to approve electronic surveillance to acquire foreign intelligence information without a court order, but only if the Attorney General makes the certifications required by that Section.

1-102. Pursuant to Section 102(b) of the Foreign Intelligence Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1802(b)), the Attorney General is authorized to approve applications to the court having jurisdiction under Section 103 of that Act to obtain orders for electronic surveillance for the purpose of obtaining foreign intelligence information.

1-103. Pursuant to Section 104(a)(7) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1804(a)(7)), the following officials, each of whom is employed in the area of national security or defense, is designated to make the certifications required by Section 104(a)(7) of the Act in support of applications to conduct electronic surveillance:

(a) Secretary of State.

(b) Secretary of Defense.

(c) Director of Central Intelligence.

(d) Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(e) Deputy Secretary of State.

(f) Deputy Secretary of Defense.

(g) Deputy Director of Central Intelligence.

None of the above officials, nor anyone officially acting in that capacity, may exercise the authority to make the above certifications, unless that official has been appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

1-104. Section 2-202 of Executive Order No. 12036 is amended by inserting the following at the end of that section: "Any electronic surveillance, as defined in the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, shall be conducted in accordance with that Act as well as this Order.".

1-105. Section 2-203 of Executive Order No. 12036 is amended by inserting the following at the end of that section: "Any monitoring which constitutes electronic surveillance as defined in the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 shall be conducted in accordance with that Act as well as this Order.".

Dear Bill:

I am pleased that you have accepted an invitation to speak at our Headquarters building on October 6, 1980, from 10:00 a.m. until noon. Your topic "Intelligence in the 1980s" will be relevant and timely to members of our Intelligence Division and other Special Agents who will also attend.

You may wish to know that last year several executives from Central Intelligence Agency's various Directorates spoke to members of the Intelligence Division in an effort to explain the numerous functions of their Directorates. These talks were very well received.

It will be my pleasure to introduce you. I trust that you will be able to stay for lunch.

Sincerely yours,

William H. Webster

On 9/17/80 SA [redacted], Unit Chief of the Chemistry-Toxicology Unit and SA [redacted] Unit Chief of the Microscopic Analyses Unit attended a CIA seminar in Rosslyn, Virginia. The seminar was presented (S) by [redacted] and [redacted] of [redacted] Although there appeared to be no practical application that would be of benefit to the FBI Laboratory at this moment, the seminar was interesting and enlightening and was deemed very worthwhile in attending. [redacted] (S) advised he would furnish to the FBI a copy of his agency's report as soon as it is available. This will be given to the Research Unit for any evaluation they may have.

Dear [redacted] (S)

Pursuant to our conversation over luncheon at the Agency several months ago, I am enclosing two copies of an FBI memorandum dated October 1[illegible], 1980, entitled "Federal Bureau of Investigation, Foreign Counterintelligence Responsibilities and Information Needs."

This memorandum sets forth the FBI's authority to conduct foreign counterintelligence (FCI) investigations and lists the various types of FCI investigations for which we have responsibility. Included is a list of information needs deemed essential to the execution of our FCI responsibilities.

As you know, it is our hope that information regarding our FCI needs can be furnished by you to your Station Chiefs abroad. We are convinced that there are no Attorney General Guidelines problems regarding any counterintelligence information developed by the Station Chiefs regarding U.S. persons and furnished to us, according to our needs set out in the attached memorandum. I have reason to believe that the Department of Justice would support us on this guidelines issue. If you have any further questions, please don't hesitate to give me a call.

Sincerely,

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Dear Stan:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend the performances of Messrs. [redacted] (S) of your agency regarding their work in a cooperative Central Intelligence Agency/Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) effort [redacted] Their initial and continuing intelligence efforts, and the subsequent sharing of resultant knowledge gained therefrom, indicate a distinct possibility for an expansion of the tactical and strategic effectiveness of a major FBI undercover operation. Preliminary products resulting from their initial covert activities in this matter are extremely encouraging and evidence outstanding potential for the eventual accomplishment of our joint aims in this shared mission.

Sincerely yours,

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for your letter of December 5th. I concur completely with your statements regarding the value of the relationship which exists between the FBI and your office on counterintelligence matters. I think both your office and the FBI have mutually benefited from this relationship, and I can assure you that as long as I sit where I do, it will continue.

I and those who work in this Division are most appreciative of the support which you have given to us over the years. We view your retirement with a sense of regret but, on the other hand, feel fortunate that we have had the benefit of your counsel and friendship over the years.

Judge: OC J.A.

Attached asks that, in cases involving prosecution or potential prosecution, any FBI requests for CIA information or assistance be sent to the Office of General Counsel (OGC).

Basically, this represents no change in our policy, since in such matters we work closely with OGC as well as the CIA operational Division involved. However, if you approve, the attached will be circulated as a reminder to agent personnel of the Criminal and Intelligence Divisions. Our requests for assistance of CIA in operational matters not relating to prosecution or potential prosecution will continue to be sent to the Deputy Director of Operations which, in almost all cases, coordinates with OGC.

Dear Frank:

Re: FBI Requests for Information in Support of Department of Justice Investigations and Prosecution

In response to your letter of October 23, 1980, which asks that all FBI requests for information or assistance in support of our investigations of violation of law be sent to CIA General Counsel, the FBI Intelligence and Criminal Investigative Divisions have been instructed to conform to this procedure.

As you know, in the intelligence field the FBI has traditionally found it necessary to draw a careful distinction between law enforcement investigations and those intelligence activities which may have law enforcement connotations, e.g., espionage investigations. Throughout our procedures, we have used the distinction drawn by Judge Bryant in the Truong case in which an intelligence case remains that until there is a focus on prosecution or the primary purpose becomes prosecution, at which time it is considered to become law enforcement in character. The FBI will use this logic in the application of your request to us as we have done in similar E. O. 12036 procedures relating to law enforcement activities.

Dear (5)

Both personally and on behalf of the FBI, I want to offer congratulations on the occasion of your retirement. The FBI is saddened to lose such a longtime friend and colleague. This occasion enables us, however, to stop and offer our gratitude for the many years it has been our pleasure to enjoy a professional and personal relationship with you. You have always been mindful of FBI interests in the intelligence community and for this we are most appreciative.

It is an honor for me to present a plaque as a small token of our appreciation. You are certainly deserving of this and more for your accomplishments in the field of national security. It is a pleasure to join Assistant Director O'Malley, our Liaison Staff and many others here at FBI Headquarters and in the field who have had the privilege of working with you in this special wish for a future of productive and happy years.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Does the Chair know of any other Senators who care to speak?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further morning business? If not, the morning business is closed.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, do I still have 10 minutes reserved to me? If I do, I will yield it back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair believes the time has been yielded back.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE

NOMINATION OF VICE ADM. B. R. INMAN, U.S. NAVY, TO BE DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE, AND TO HAVE THE RANK OF ADMIRAL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of Executive Calendar No. 2, the nomination of Vice Adm. B. R. Inman, U.S. Navy, to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, and to have the rank of admiral while so serving. The nomination will be stated.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, before the clerk states the nomination, I ask unanimous consent that we withhold on that business and that the Senate go into executive session to consider the promotion of the same gentleman that this other matter pertains to.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, what is the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say to the Senator from Arizona we are in executive session.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we go into executive session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I ask that the clerk state the nomination of Vice Adm. B. R. Inman, U.S. Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nomination will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Vice Adm. B. R. Inman, U.S. Navy, to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, and to have the rank of admiral while so serving.

Mr. GOLDWATER. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate approve the promotion of Admiral Inman.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, is there going to be a rollcall vote on the nomination?

Mr. GOLDWATER. On this one, no.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. On the nomination.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I wonder if we could have a chance to get the word out so if there is a request for a rollcall vote——

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I inquire, is the nomination on the Executive Calendar which has now been laid before the Senate the nomination of Vice Admiral Inman to be Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, or a nomination to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence with the rank of admiral?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the latter.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate first proceed to the consideration of the nomination of Admiral Inman to the rank of admiral and to proceed after that to consider the nomination of Admiral Inman to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. That is two separate items on the calendar.

Mr. GOLDWATER. If the Senator will yield, that is just what we have done. Now we go back to regular session and the Chair has already ordered the consideration of calendar order something—I do not remember the number.

Mr. BAKER. To make sure we fully understand the parliamentary situation at this moment, Mr. President, the first item of consideration at the moment will be the promotion of Admiral Inman to the rank of full admiral.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That has been ordered by unanimous consent.

Mr. BAKER. Following after that nomination will be the nomination of Admiral Inman to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have an idea there may be a request for a rollcall vote on the second nomination to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at this time to ask for the yeas and nays on that nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. I ask for the yeas and nays on the nomination, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New York, the Senator from Arizona, and the Chair for their indulgence.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, has the first nomination been agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not at this time.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I believe I reserved my right to object.

I certainly have no objection to that and I just want to make sure that we were going to give adequate notice to our respective sides with respect to a rollcall vote.

I have no objection.

NOMINATION OF VICE ADM. B. R. INMAN TO BE ADMIRAL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question comes first on confirming the nomination of Vice Adm. B. R. Inman to be admiral.

Mr. GOLDWATER. I ask unanimous consent that that be favorably voted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is considered and confirmed.

NOMINATION OF VICE ADM. B. R. INMAN TO BE DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE

Mr. GOLDWATER. Now may we go back to the regular business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next item of business is the nomination for Vice Adm. B. R. Inman to be Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I shall not take long on this matter.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

ENCLOSURE

Mr. GOLDWATER. I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the rollcall vote on this nomination occur at 1:30 p.m. today.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, I do so only to thank the majority leader for making this request. There is a Member on my side who had to leave the office, I understand, because of an emergency and he will not be back until 1:30 p.m. today. So I appreciate having that time set.

I have no objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, today we are considering the nomination of Admiral Inman to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. President Reagan made a wise choice in nominating Admiral Inman for this position. The Senate Intelligence Committee thought so too, as they voted unanimously to approve him.

At the nomination hearing, I told Admiral Inman that he had my vote even before I heard his testimony. If there ever was such a thing as the right man for the right job at the right time—he is that man.

I might say, Mr. President, in the years that I have been engaged in intelligence work, I have never known a man as adept in this field as Admiral Inman. He is respected all over the world as one of the finest intelligence men available, so we are very fortunate to have him move over.

Just last week, at the Bill Casey hearing, I urged, along with my colleagues, that he go after Admiral Inman for this job, so this nomination is good news to me. He is a man of outstanding qualifications and integrity. We are lucky to have him and the Nation will be better for it.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to act favorably on the nomination of Admiral Inman.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a background paper on the admiral appear at this point in the RECORD.

I ask unanimous consent that the statement of Vice Adm. Bobby R. Inman appear at this point in the RECORD; and ask unanimous consent that a statement for completion by Presidential nominees appear at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF VICE ADM. BOBBY R. INMAN, U.S. NAVY

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee: It is a distinct pleasure to appear before this Committee on this occasion. I have been nominated by the President to serve as the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. You are all generally aware of my background and my most recent assignment as Director, National Security Agency. However, it may be useful for me to review that background and experience in light of this nomination.

As a native of the state of Texas, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from the University of Texas at Austin in 1950. Shortly after joining the Naval Reserve in 1951 and being commissioned as an Ensign in 1952, I joined the USS VALLEY FORGE, then participating in operations in the Korean area. Later, I served in various administrative assignments in the European theater. Following release from and then return to active duty with the Navy, I served in various shipborne operational assignments and in several intelligence assignments functioning as an intelligence analyst and as the Assistant Naval Attache, American Embassy, Stockholm, Sweden.

Subsequent assignments included service as the Fleet Intelligence Officer on the staff of the Commander SEVENTH Fleet; attendance at the National War College; Executive Assistant and Senior Aide to the Vice Chief of Naval Operations; Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence to the Commander in Chief, U.S. Pacific Fleet; Director of Naval Intelligence; and Vice Director for Plans, Operations and Support, Defense Intelligence Agency. Since 5 July 1977, I have had the pleasure of serving as Director, National Security Agency.

Although my current assignment has involved me heavily in the collection and production of intelligence information, the majority of my experience during 21 years of service in the field of intelligence has been as an analyst and as a manager. The variety of my assignments has provided me with a unique perspective on the need to balance the production and analytic facets of the intelligence mission and to provide for the needs of the Nation's policymakers both in the Executive and the Congress.

I am in complete agreement with Mr. Casey in his statement to this Committee that it is vital that this Nation have a strong and effective intelligence organization with a wide range of capabilities and the flexibility to adapt and focus them on whatever exterior threats or problems confront the nation. While I face the coming years with optimism, it is tinged with a realization—based on my years of experience in various parts of this business—of the immense task we face. I have frequently recalled a statement made by a senior intelligence officer in 1977 with respect to the current and future intelligence environment, when he pointed out:

"There are more things about which we need intelligence data, but there is the prospect that intelligence may be harder to obtain."

Recent events have re-emphasized the increasing conflict of these real world facts. Today a greater portion of the world's nations withhold information concerning their activities, plans and intentions. There is less free and open access of the character that we value as a people and a Nation. At the same time there is greater competition for and control of available resources. As a result there is a significantly greater need for a variety of intelligence information that extends beyond the historical orientation on military and political information. Equally significant is the growing mobility of our principal adversaries with the accompanying threat of the use of power in the third world to challenge our long term economic, political, and military interests. The growth in the use of various forms of terror adds a destabilizing factor that requires modifications to the traditional means of prioritizing intelligence coverage and allocating intelligence resources. The increasing sophistication of technology and of its use by our adversaries further complicates our ability to collect raw data and refocus analytic effort. At the same time, there are recurrent efforts around the world to spread disinformation about our intelligence activities and discredit our intelligence agencies designed to reduce the willingness of individuals and entities to work with us.

In order to meet these challenges, we must foster within our Government an environment that affords the Intelligence Community the resources necessary to provide a sufficient variety of modern collection methods including technical and human capabilities, to continuously maintain a technical base of information, to focus upon any particular crisis of the moment while maintaining our worldwide watch, and to meet the users' needs for information concerning a wide variety of interests. This requires that we focus our attention in the budget process on the resources needed to maintain the whole system rather than on what can be cut based on the lack of current interest in a particular area. It means that we must recruit and retain personnel of great skill to design, build, operate, process, analyze and report finished intelligence, and to assist the users of intelligence information in understanding what can be and has been provided.

In order to assure that finished intelligence information is the best available, it is my view that there is a real benefit from encouraging strong multi-discipline centers of expertise within the intelligence community. No one agency has a monopoly on talent or sources and competition spurs each to maintain higher standards of performance and service. Guidance in the form of standards and in the allocation of community services is needed and is a useful function, and all duplication of functional activities should be examined regularly to ensure that it is productive redundancy. What is needed is a healthy competitive Community that enjoys the confidence of the Government's policymakers and of the Nation.

We now have a wealth of experience concerning the guidelines under which intelligence agencies operate. A fine tuning of those guidelines, especially the detailed procedures that implement those guidelines, may be in order. However, on the whole the guidelines and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act have evolved into a system that provides procedural protections for the rights of individuals and flexible guidelines for intelligence agencies. Although there is some work to be done in the area of emergency authorization to provide flexible responses to crisis situations, and perhaps some need for review of the counterintelligence aspects, I believe that the overall system is working and is not in need of a major overhaul.

My predecessor as the DDCI served both as the day-to-day manager of the CIA and as an active participant in Community affairs. It is my expectation that I will serve in a similar capacity and I have discussed the matter with Director Casey, who agrees. It is his expressed desire that I pay particular attention to the DCI's community responsibilities and I will spend a good deal of my time on that.

Congress and the Executive Branch have worked closely in the past few years to establish a solid foundation for cooperation. This past year that foundation was incorporated into the National Security Act of 1947 as a new section 501 covering congressional oversight. This new section maintains the balance between the two branches while providing a mechanism for permitting Presidential flexibility where sensitive operations are involved. Director Casey has already stated his position on this matter to you. This Committee and I have been cooperating on these matters under Executive Order and now under Section 501 for the past three and one-half years and can assure the Committee that I am in agreement with Director Casey's statement to you "to cooperate fully in facilitating the oversight through which Congress can ensure that the intelligence community operates within the limits of the law."

If confirmed, I look forward to working productively with Director Casey and this Committee on the problems facing the Intelligence Community and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I am happy to yield to my friend from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it is characteristically gracious of my distinguished chairman to give me this opportunity to join with him in making this unanimous report recommending this nomination by the President to the Senate.

As the chairman has noted, for 4 years now, Vice Admiral Inman—dare I say Admiral Inman, the nomination to admiral having been confirmed, has served as the Director of the National Security Agency.

In the widest range of issues which come to the Intelligence Committee and which it is our responsibility to understand for the Senate, as it were; which include the most complex technological intelligence issues the Nation faces; which probe some of the most significant subjects such as the issue of verification of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties—with respect to all these issues, we have found in Admiral Inman an altogether cooperative, inventive, energetic officer, fully responsive to the oversight responsibilities of this Congress, but not only responsive.

Hamilton once described good government as energy in the executive, and Admiral Inman has shown energy in this enterprise which has not failed to impress each of us who dealt with him. It speaks to our judgment that we report his nomination unanimously and that, as the chairman said, the first advice we gave to the President's nominee for Director of Central Intelligence was to get Bobby Inman as his Deputy.

I should like to diverge, if I may, Mr. President, just one moment to comment on a matter which both reflects upon the nominee and speaks to the emerging regime of understanding and cooperation between the intelligence community on the one hand, and the Congress and the public, on the other, which I think one sees developing.

The adversary relationship of 10 years past is giving way. It is giving way to cooperation in part because there have been imaginative persons such as Admiral Inman in the community.

As we know, Mr. President, the National Security Agency has among its many concerns, and central to its concerns, the matter of cryptology. It is a very long time from that day in the 1930's when Henry L. Stimson, discovering that we had some code experts working on foreign codes, said, "A gentleman does not read another gentleman's mail," and abolished the enterprise. Fortunately, a few people kept on, and we had the Japanese code when the time came.

This has always been an affair of closely-held secrets. Yet, simultaneously, cryptology is an intellectual discipline that has become incredibly more complex in some ways, more simple in others, through the development of the high-speed computer. It is now possible to encrypt language and technical data in ways that never could have been done, mechanically or even electromechanically. The computer makes some permutations and combinations available that were beyond anybody's power until very recently.

This, of course, is basically a field of mathematics; and, as one would expect, mathematicians have grown interested in the subject. Inevitably, there came a point at which the interests of the scientific community began to get very close to the activities of the intelligence community; and the possibility for distrust, for anger, for disruption, for heaven knows what mischief, was certainly there.

However, rather than give the order—if I may use the terminology—to repel boarders when it appeared that they might be encroaching on the NSA, Admiral Inman, in effect, welcomed them aboard. He gave a public speech in early 1978, and was interviewed in Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and asked the scientific community, "How can we work together? Certainly, our interests cannot be divergent. Why should we not try jointly to resolve any conflicts between us and to learn more about this?"

Partially as a result of the admiral's speech, the American Council on Education asked how they might respond; and a development is now underway to see whether a panel, funded by the National Science Foundation, can establish a cooperative procedure involving the academic world, the NSA, and other activities in Washington.

That is nice going. That shows how to make an opportunity out of something which 10 years ago would have been turned into a dreary confrontation, with a loss of time and energy and reputation to all concerned.

That is only an example, but not the least important, of why we now ask of Admiral Inman that he be the deputy for the whole of the intelligence community, sharing the particular responsibility, enacted by statute last year, of reporting in the most precise and full manner to the Intelligence Committees of the House and the Senate.

This reporting is a very extensive matter. It requires of the chairman and the vice chairman a very great deal of time. It is worth it to the Senate. Certainly there was no hesitation on our part, for the period we were given this assignment, to do it. We feel altogether confident that in Admiral Inman we have a person who understands the spirit in which this legislation was adopted and will adhere to it—not because he has to, but because he wishes to.

This is his view of what our relationship should be, as well as ours, and this bodes well in all respects for the fashioning of intelligence in the very difficult years which the United States clearly faces in international relations in the first half of the 1980's.

I should like to add a personal word of congratulation to the admiral. As of 12:30 p.m., I believe, he became one of the youngest admirals in the history of the U.S. Navy, a history not without its glory, and, in the annals of naval enterprises, the oldest continuously organized command in the history of navies except for the British.

I warm to that thought, Mr. President. With the single exception of the Admiralty in London, no navy on Earth has had such a long, continuously unbroken command as the U.S. Navy.

In that history, this is one of the youngest men to attain the rank of full admiral, a distinction which even the very distinguished Senator from New Mexico (Mr. SCHMITT) has not attained in his otherwise incomparable career.

*Schedule: Residence in Arlington, Va., (value estimated from recent tax evaluation plus inflation factor).

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I thank the vice chairman for his comments. They certainly were well put and proper.

I conclude by noting that the intelligence community of our country has gone through some very trying times in the last 10 years. There are about 19 different members of the intelligence family. They do not work as closely together as some people would like, and I doubt that they ever could work too closely.

The Central Intelligence Agency, in particular, came under great criticism during the days of the so-called Church committee, to the end that we lost many of our senior people. Losing senior people in intelligence is important, because these men and women have reached the point of experience at which they are able to assess the intelligence we gather.

As a result of this unfortunate publicity, the very word "intelligence" has taken on a sinister reputation in this country, and I am happy to say that it seems to be over. We are now receiving many applications from young people to work in intelligence; and if this continues, we will be able to rebuild the older group who did the assessing.

As I have said many times—not trying to defend the actions of the CIA, because some of them, I have to admit, were outside the metes and bounds that have been prescribed—the most serious charges against the CIA resulted in orders from their Commander in Chief, the President, both Republicans and Democrats. When the Commander in Chief tells you to do something, you do it, whether it is supposed to be done or not.

As a result, newspapers jumped on the CIA, the press generally jumped on the CIA, and the business of intelligence became public property.

Mr. President, this is the only country I know of in which the public knows as much about our intelligence as our American people know.

Certainly with the KGB in Russia there is nothing known by the Russian people.

Under the English system, which I personally think is one of the best in the world, the information is not known even to other members of the intelligence group. My good friend from New York and I, as close friends as we are, could be working on the same case and never know it. That to me is the essence of intelligence, and I frankly hope that someday we can get back closer to that concept.

I do not think frankly that it is any business of any newspaper in this country or any television or radio station what transpires in the collection of intelligence or even in so-called covert actions for counterespionage. The committee which is set up by Senate Resolution 400, which the Senator from New York and I are members of, is privy to the covert actions that are to be done by the intelligence community.

I think I can safely report that intelligence gathering in this country is probably on a par with any other country, that intelligence assessment is not on a par with any other country, and the understanding of assessment of intelligence is not on a par with any other country.

But I wish to assure my colleagues that it is the purpose of the vice chairman and the chairman to do our best to see to it that when we leave the post that we occupy intelligence will have improved because we cannot run a country without knowing what the enemy is up to. We cannot run a business without knowing what the opposition is doing. We cannot engage in politics without peeking under the sheet once in a while to see what is going on.

So intelligence is a most necessary part of our daily lives and a necessary part of the pursuit of peace and the exercise of foreign policy.

Mr. President, I have no further comments to make on this subject, and we have unanimous-consent agreement to vote at 1:30 p.m.

So I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, with just a few minutes remaining before the vote on the confirmation of Admiral Bobby Inman, I want to take a few moments to reiterate what has already been said, and to associate myself with the remarks made by the distinguished chairman of the Intelligence Committee, the Senator from Arizona, and the distinguished ranking minority member of that committee, the Senator from New York, in regards to the qualifications of this particular appointee for the job to which he has been nominated.

I have served on the Intelligence Committee since its inception, and prior to that the Senate committee that investigated the intelligence operations of this country.

During that length of time, like others who have spoken, I have found no one more qualified and more diligent in undertaking his tasks, and more suited for the position for which he has been appointed, than Adm. Bobby Inman. He is a man of uncommon intellect, a man of great energy, a man who appreciates the need for good, sound, efficient, and effective intelligence; a man who has been involved in some of the most complicated factors of that intelligence operation.

So I would like to add my endorsement and urge my colleagues to give Admiral Inman a resounding vote of confidence and approval in the confirmation vote that is to follow in just a few minutes.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, for the past several years it has been my privilege to serve as a member of the Select Committee on Intelligence, and in that capacity I have had an opportunity to observe very closely the work of Admiral Inman as Director of the National Security Agency.

I believe he has performed his duties at NSA in as professional and exemplary manner as any public servant with whom I worked in my 20 years as a Member of the Congress. He is intelligent and sensitive. He is totally committed and totally dedicated. I feel that though his services will be missed at NSA, his talents as Deputy Director of Central Intelligence will be of great value.

I congratulate Admiral Inman on the expression of confidence in proposing him which is implicit in the President's nomination, but I also congratulate President Reagan on having available a public servant of the quality of Admiral Inman to go into the Central Intelligence Agency.

With the criticisms that have been made of our intelligence system I think we sometimes place blame at the wrong place.

We have a large intelligence system of highly professional people, supported by some of the greatest technology in the world. But the weak link, as I have observed it, is very ultimately the link between the producer of the intelligence and the consumer of the intelligence, between the intelligence services that produce the information and those in the executive branch who must act upon it.

In Admiral Inman, President Reagan will have an intelligence adviser with experience, with knowledge, and with a real sense of what is truly important and what demands the President's immediate attention. I hope that President Reagan will take full advantage of his competence and his talent.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I got to know Admiral Inman during the consideration of the SALT hearings. On numerous occasions various Members of the Senate were briefed about the SALT hearings, about the SALT agreement and the various aspects of it so that I became familiar with a number of members of the intelligence community here in Washington and attended many hearings of many committees of which I was not a member, inasmuch as I thought that the SALT treaty was going to be the most important vote that I would make during my first 2 years in the Senate.

I got to know Admiral Inman. I visited his place of business. I visited his home. I got to know his family, and I was much impressed with his eminence in the field of intelligence, with his capabilities and with the integrity of the man that is now being considered and I am sure will be confirmed to the deputy position at the CIA.

Mr. President, I think that the Nation is going to be particularly well served by having a person as professional, as knowledgeable and as capable as Admiral Inman at the CIA. I think that the CIA has had its problems over the years and, together with the new Director, I think we have a team there that, better than any within my recollection, will have the opportunity of bringing new energy and new vitality to that Agency which is so necessary and so vital in the defense of American interest.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Adm. Bobby Ray Inman as Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

First let me state that Inman is a South Carolina name. I am not certain how his family ended up in Texas, probably via South Carolina. But in any case it was South Carolina's loss and a gain for Texas.

Mr. President, Admiral Inman is exceptionally well qualified for this post. He is intelligent, aggressive, a realist, and, most important, he understands the Soviet threat and the Communist mentality. This is vital when you have the responsibility of projecting Soviet goals and estimating their programs.

Admiral Inman brings to this position a highly distinguished military career. A graduate of the University of Texas, in 1950, he was commissioned an ensign in the Navy in 1952 and served in most major military theaters in the world.

Early in his career he entered the intelligence field and although he held other positions of great importance over the past 20 years, his career focused entirely in this area when, in 1973, he was named assistant chief of staff for intelligence for the commander-in-chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

He soon moved up to Director of Naval Intelligence in 1974 and later to the post of Vice Director for Plans, Operations and Support in the Defense Intelligence Agency.

This assignment was followed by appointment as Director of Naval Intelligence in 1974 and later Vice Director for Plans, Operations, and Support in the Defense Intelligence Agency.

In 1977 he was named Director of the National Security Agency and it is from this position that he comes to the CIA.

Mr. President, Admiral Inman is imminently qualified for this assignment, and I urge early and favorable approval of his nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 1:30 having arrived, the Senate will proceed to vote upon the confirmation of B. R. Inman to be Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. BAKER. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) and the Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Nevada (Mr. CANNON), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD), the Senator from Montana (Mr. MELCHER), and the Senator from Michigan (Mr. RIEGLE) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Nevada (Mr. CANNON) would vote "yea."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Have all Senators been recorded on this vote?

The result was announced—yeas 94, nays, 0—as follows:

So the nomination was confirmed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified that the Senate has granted its consent to the nomination of Admiral Inman to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence and as well that the Senate has confirmed the nomination of Admiral Inman to the rank of full admiral.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, not to extend beyond 2:30 p.m., in which Senators may speak for not more than 5 minutes each.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WALLOP). Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. JOHNSTON, in connection with the introduction of legislation, and also the remarks of Mr. LONG and Mr. MCCLURE, are printed under Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.)

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate convene in executive session for the purpose of considering the nomination of Donald P. Hodel, of Oregon, to be Under Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I understand this matter has been cleared on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. BURDICK. The Senator is correct. It has been cleared on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

NOMINATION OF DONALD P. HODEL, OF OREGON, TO BE UNDER SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the nomination of Donald P. Hodel, of Oregon, to be Under Secretary of the Interior.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Donald P. Hodel, of Oregon, to be Under Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, the Senate Energy and National Resources Committee conducted a hearing and a business meeting this morning to consider the nomination of Donald P. Hodel for Under Secretary of the Department of the Interior.

The committee in a business meeting voted unanimously to report this nomination to the full Senate. I must at this time thank the ranking member of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee (Mr. JACKSON) for his complete cooperation in allowing us to expedite the Senate confirmation of Mr. Hodel. I am grateful also to the distinguished minority leader (Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD) for his complete cooperation in this matter.

I wish to assure my colleagues that as far as I can determine this nomination is without controversy. Mr. Hodel has the complete support of the Secretary of the Interior, the Senatorial delegation from his home State of Oregon, and the ranking member of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, (Mr. JACKSON).

Mr. President, as I stated this morning, the position of Under Secretary of the Department of the Interior can b
